Writer Tells Supreme Soviet West Glosses Over Nazi Murders

A leading Soviet playwright said in the Supreme Soviet that Jews were among the principal victims of Nazi death camps. The statement attracted attention among some observers because it has not been fashionable in official Soviet announcements recently to single out Jews as wartime victims of the Germans.

The playwright, Aleksandre Y. Korneichuk, told the National Parliament that "Jews, Poles and other peoples" had been murdered at such places as Buchenwald, Auschwitz, and Babi Yar, says the New York Times. At another point in his speech Mr. Korneichuk said, "Soviet, Polish, and Jewish children" had been among those killed by Germans in World War II.

Mr. Korneichuk, who is not a Jew, spoke in the closing session of the Supreme Soviet as part of a debate on a report on the Geneva negotiations by Andrei A. Gromyko, the Soviet Foreign Minister.

The playwright charged that the West was doing its best to foster West German militarists and was glossing over the Germans' wartime policy of mass murder, which he called "their contribution to Western civilization." It was in this context that Mr. Korneichuk mentioned Jews.

A 56-year-old Ukrainian, Mr. Korneichuk is a resident of the city of Kiev, where the gully known as Babi Yar was the scene of one of the worst Nazi massacres of Jews in World War II. The gully is now filled in. A monument to those who died in wartime Kiev does not make a special point of mentioning Jews.

Babi Yar was the subject of a controversial poem last year by Yevgeny Yevtushenko, a young Soviet poet. Lamenting the fact that there were "no memorials at Babi Yar," the poem was interpreted by some as an attack on latent anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union.

Mr. Yevtushenko was reported to have denied that such was his intent. He was said to have described Nazism as his primary target.

Mr. Korneichuk, who is a prominent member of the World Peace Council, has been active in promoting round-table conferences between Soviet and Western leaders in the arts and sciences to explore the possibilities of an East-West accommodation, says the New York Times. He is believed to be among prominent Soviet figures who have become concerned by unfavorable publicity given to the Soviet Union in the Western press as a result of the execution of Jews who were among about two dozen persons condemned to death on currency speculation charges in recent months.

Says Need For Highly Skilled Doctors In Israel Persists

The associate dean of the Hebrew University Medical School in Jerusalem says that although Israel has a high ratio of doctors to population "the need for highly skilled physicians persists and could become urgent."

The observation was made some time ago by Dr. Moshe Prywes at a press conference in the offices of the American Friends of the Hebrew University, 11 East Sixty-ninth Street, New York, says the New York Times. Commenting on the most recent arrival of physicians migrating into Israel, Dr. Prywes said that a sizable percentage of them were of advanced age.

"Without new infusions of young, Israel-trained doctors the ratio of physicians to population would decline in the not-too-distant future," he added. Dr. Prywes observed that a new immigrant physician could hardly be expected to cope with "the multiplicity of physical and emotional problems growing out of the very nature of Israel's heterogeneous population."

He explained that Israel's medical profession "is extraordinarily heterogeneous," since 50 per cent of the country's doctors had gone there since Israel became a nation and about 90 per cent had previously practiced medicine in other countries.

Dr. Prywes said that while the graduates of the Hebrew University Medical School now constituted only 12 per cent of the physicians in Israel "they are, nevertheless, the largest group with a homogeneous medical education."

"The need for such homogeneity will increase as Israel's medical services expand," he went on. "A whole generation of young doctors rooted in local problems and aware of the health needs of the country is now being trained at the school."

Moreover, he noted the medical education his school was giving to African and Asian students with the assistance of the World Health Organization. But he stressed that the graduating of a score of African and Asian students each year would not solve the health problems of Africa, "a continent

Portrait Of Nazi Emulators Is Clear From Bnai Brith A. D. L. Study Of Background

Twenty-two had police records. Ten were trouble makers in school. Fourteen belonged to Nazi-type gangs. Twenty collected Nazi emblems. Nine had German uniforms. One was partially impotent. And all had backgrounds of family instability.

Such were some of the findings made public of an "in depth" study of forty-one of the 154 youths arrested during the 1960 nation-wide epidemic of swastika smearing, says the New York Herald Tribune. Synagogues or other Jewish targets were involved in about half the cases.

The study, disclosed at the annual meeting of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith, at the Savoy Hilton, in New York, found that 80 per cent of the youths — their median age was sixteen — came from families classed as "broken or unstable" because of alcoholism, mental illness, prison records, or divorce.

Samuel Dalsimer, League program committee chairman who presented the report, said:

"With few exceptions, there was no remorse among their parents about the nature of the anti-social behavior of the children . . . but only sorrow that their children had gotten into trouble. They seemed concerned about bad publicity and their community's negative reaction but there was little or no disapproval of the acts themselves."

Fifty-one per cent of the youths, Mr. Dalsimer said, expressed strong anti-Semitic bias and yet "few of them had ever known Jews or had any personal experience with them that could explain their hostility.

"All the boys answered questions about Jews in vague generalities unrelated to their personal experience. Thus they might say that Jews control all the money but they had never met a Jew who controlled large sums of money. Or, they would say that Jews control the government yet they could never specify a Jew who had influence in government.

"The Nazi-oriented youths, however, in some cases offered the name of Roosevelt as a Jew who controlled the government."

The study suggested that this lack of personal animosity "might account for the fact that in the 1960 outbreak, the youths attacked property, not people, for their hatred was directed against symbolic institutions, not any particular individuals."

It was noted that the vandal who was partially impotent, a twenty-one-year-old son of an alcoholic father who deserted his family, says the New York Herald Tribune, painted his swastikas "after an unsatisfactory sexual experience with his wife."

Feelings of inadequacy were found again and again in the temple defacers and the report deduced: "For many of these youths, the militarism, the paraphernalia, the organized purposes of neo-Nazism probably can be reduced to the need to identify with organized fear-instilling power."

Boredom was a recurring theme among the boys from lower-class homes. Attraction to power and devotion to the swastika as a symbol of "specialness", superiority, and strength was found over and over among those from middle-class homes.

Fifteen of the youths were leaders. Twenty were followers. Six were loners. All were white. Two, though part Jewish, were actively anti-Semitic and one was in George Lincoln Rockwell's Nazi party. A total of 37 per cent listed cars as their main interest while another 37 per cent listed uniforms. The rest said "guns and military."

The report explained:

"When those with a strong Nazi ideology were asked how they felt about Nazi-American conflict in the last war, they rationalized their Nazi identification by claiming that we were tricked into the war by Jewish-Communist control of the government, the newspapers and the Army . . . The remainder of the apprehended who did not share this ideology nevertheless revealed a definite attraction for desecrating Jewish targets," reports the New York Herald Tribune. The study was made by Dr. Martin Dautsch, associate professor in the department of psychiatry at New York Medical College.

Central Council Of German Jews Breaks Out Against Anti-Semitic Press Material

West Germany's small Jewish Community broke its long silence about the reappearance of violently anti-Semitic material in the German press. After months of forbearance, writes Gaston Coblentz, in the New York Herald Tribune, the secretary-general of the Central Council of Jews in Germany charged that widely-read German magazines are publishing inflammatory anti-Jewish letters-to-the-editor written in the style of Julius Streicher, erstwhile Nazi gauleiter of Nuremberg and publisher of the Third Reich's pornographic anti-Semitic weekly, The Stuermer.

The open complaint voiced by the leader of the Jewish Council, H. G. Van Dam, was in contrast to the organization's usual effort to smooth over difficulties experienced by Germany's surviving Jews.

The Jewish protest was voiced in a front page article published by the General Weekly of the Jews in Germany, of Duesseldorf. Worded in bitter language, it warned that West Germany's postwar freedom of the press was being abused and was in danger of being eroded in a "macabre" manner.

It accused some of the country's popular illustrated papers of four alleged offenses:

1. Publication of anti-Semitic letters-to-the-editor that flout the human-rights provisions of West German's post-war democratic constitution.

2. The printing of violently anti-German letters signed with unmistakably Jewish names. These letters were said to produce an equally violent anti-Semitic reaction, says the New York Herald Tribune. The Jewish leader voiced the suspicion that the anti-German letters were covertly planted by anti-Semites to whip up anti-Jewish feeling.

3. Publication of illustrations for such movies as "Jew Suss" and "Oliver Twist" that tend to "drive the masses, and above all the youth, backwards into the regions of superstition and unproductive resentments."

4. The identification of a witness in a malodorous legal trial as a Jewish merchant.

"It seems to us that the religious faith, the origin, the nationality, and the political party membership defendants and witness in such affairs is without any significance, unless one is trying to prove something."

The Jewish complaint noted that editors of the illustrated papers, when questioned, distanced themselves from the anti-Semitic material and said it did not in any way reflect their own views.

In addition, the editors were quoted as saying that they were performing a valuable public service by divulging the existence of such currents in German life.

Mr. Van Dam said that the reappearance of anti-Semitic content in the German press made it difficult, reports the New York Herald Tribune, for West Germany's Jewish community to convince interested persons abroad that things were going well in the Bonn Republic.

"When we talk with foreign observers of contemporary German events, we continually hear that these letters-to-the-editor more accurately reflect unofficial, repeat unofficial, opinion in West Ger-

Grant Of $350,000 Will Beautify Brandeis U. Campus

Brandeis University plans for landscaping its 270-acre campus at Waltham, Mass., under provisions of a $350,000 grant from the David Schwartz Foundation of New York, will make it over. The 14-year-old University has constructed 39 modern buildings since it opened in 1948, with architectural master plans designed by Eero Saarinen. Five additional structures will be under construction by the end of this year.

Many of the academic and residential areas of the Brandeis campus were developed in unified quadrangles surrounding an open area near the geographic centre of the University. The terrain is rocky with rolling hills and some heavily wooded areas. Brandeis' architectural plans have always been made to highlight and compliment the natural features of the area being developed.

One hillside evolved into a natural amphitheatre. A pool once used to cool cream from dairy barns of a bygone era was reshaped into a heart to become the central theme of the University's internationally famous Three Chapel area. An exposed 60-ton boulder was left within a few feet of the glass wall and entrance of a student centre to capitalize on one of the attractive features of the site. A brook tumbling through the campus has been left exposed in some areas and arched by fieldstone bridges. Stone blasted from construction sites has been used for foundations, side walls, and, in one instance, for interior walls.

The Schwartz Foundation grant will be used further to develop existing sites of the campus and will provide opportunities to make emerging new areas as attractive as those units already completed. Mr. Schwartz earlier under-wrote construction of the $250,000 David and Irene Schwartz Teaching Center in the Social Science Quadrangle. The two-level center includes an auditorium seating 230 and classrooms on the level below. It was recently modified to include complete wiring and portable stage additions to meet the needs of educational television program production.

A Fellow of the University, Mr. Schwartz is chairman of the board of Jonathan Logan, Inc.; an Overseer of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine of Yeshiva College; and for many years a member of the board of the Anti-Defamation League. The Schwartz Foundation gift is one of the first to be reported in the University's recently-announced campaign for $65,100,000 by 1965. Designed to secure an endowment for the University, the campaign funds will underwrite academic programs, strengthen student services, reinforce graduate programs, and bolster faculty salaries.

"This is a most unusual and perceptive gift," Dr. Abram L. Sachar, president of Brandeis said. "The University has been fortunate in the beauty of its terrain. An accelerated construction program that has created fifty new buildings calls for imaginative landscaping. Mr. Schwartz, through his generosity, makes it possible each year to undertake a special project that will fulfill the extraordinary potentialities with which the terrain is endowed. Modern architecture, without adequate landscaping, is often gaunt and austere. Mr. Schwartz's gift will help to avoid such hazards and bring to fulfillment the highest expectations of our master plan."

CLASS IN COOKERY

MAPLE WALNUT CAKE

two and one-quarter cups pastry flour
three teaspoons baking powder
one teaspoon salt
three-quarters cup of cold water or cold coffee
one-half teaspoon cream of tartar
one-half cup of oil
three-quarters cup of sugar
three-quarters cup of brown sugar
five egg yolks
eight egg whites
two teaspoons maple flavouring
one cup of finely chopped walnuts

Measure and sift flour. Spoon lightly, do not pack. Add baking powder, salt, and white sugar; sift again; add brown sugar, and mix thoroughly. Make a well in it and add oil, unbeaten egg yolks, water, and flavouring. Mix in electric mixmaster until smooth for one minute. Beat egg whites stiff with cream of tartar, in large mixing bowl, until whites stand in peaks. Do not underbeat. Pour cake mixture into egg whites, and fold gently with rubber spatula, just enough, until blended. Do not stir. Fold in finely chopped walnuts. This makes a loose batter. Pour immediately into ungreased tube pan. Bake at 325 degrees for fifty minutes, then increase oven to 350 degrees, and bake for ten or fifteen minutes more, until top springs back when lightly touched. Immediately invert pan, placing tube part over funnel or bottle, so it hangs free, until cold. Turn pan over, and loosen sides of cake with spatula.

Icing

one-quarter cup butter
two tablespoons cream
two cups icing sugar
one teaspoon oil
one and one-half teaspoons vanilla

Melt butter over low heat until golden brown. Remove. Blend in other ingredients. Stir vigorously until of right consistency to spread. If too thick, add a little hot water. Spread over top of cake. Chocolate tinies, or crushed walnuts, may be sprinkled on top.

Mrs. A. A. Wright,
11 Shallmar Boulevard, Toronto.

CHEESE KNISHES

one-quarter pound butter
two eggs
one-quarter cup milk
one and one-half cups flour
two tablespoons shortening
one-quarter cup sugar
two teaspoons baking powder
one-quarter teaspoon salt

Combine butter, shortening, and sugar and blend well. Add eggs. Add the flour, baking powder, and salt which have been sifted together twice alternately with the milk. Knead to a very soft dough. Divide into two parts. Roll out dough one-quarter-inch thick on a well-floured board. Sprinkle with dots of butter. Place half of cheese filling along edge of dough and roll as for knishes. Cut into four-inch lengths. Place on a slightly greased cookie sheet and bake at 350 degrees for thirty to forty minutes until golden brown.

Filling

one pound cottage cheese
one-quarter cup sugar
one egg

Mix these ingredients well.

Over 1,000 Jewish Blind Aided To Observe Passover In Braille

More than a thousand Jewish blind men, women, and children throughout the United States, Israel, and other countries, were able to participate fully with their families and sighted friends in the Passover Seder this year because of the Jewish Braille Institute of America, in New York, said Mrs. Harry J. Finke, president of the Institute. Sightless Jewish persons received from the Institute, free of charge, either a copy of the Haggadah in Hebrew and English braille or a high-fidelity recording of the complete Haggadah service in Hebrew and English.

Production of the recording for Passover was made possible through a grant from Ivriah, an organization devoted to the advancement of Jewish religious education, and distribution of the braille Haggadahs was made possible by the National Women's League Sisterhood of Beth El Synagogue, in Omaha, Nebraska.

The Jewish Braille Institute, of which Dr. Jacob Freid is executive director, provides for the cultural and religious needs of the Jewish blind and serves thousands of sightless persons throughout the world without charge. Its program is endorsed by the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods, the National Women's League of the United Synagogue of America, and the Women's Branch of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America.

The Institute's headquarters are at 48 East 74th Street, New York, where it maintains a free circulating library of 12,000 braille volumes and an extensive collection of full-length recorded "talking books." It publishes the Jewish Braille Review, a monthly literary magazine, and also issues Hebrew-English braille prayer books and the Bible in Hebrew braille. English and Hebrew braille texts are given to Jewish blind children attending religious schools.

Times Square Renamed Warsaw Ghetto Square To Mark Uprising Massacre Of 60,000 Jews

Times Square in New York, known as the "Crossroads of the World", was renamed Warsaw Ghetto Square for a whole week in commemoration of the 19th anniversary of the Warsaw Ghetto uprising in which close to 60,000 Jews, men, women, and children, comprising the entire population of the beleaguered ghetto, were massacred by Nazi armored might. The renaming of Times Square, which was sponsored by the Zionist Organization of America jointly with its Manhattan Region, was marked by ceremonies in the presence of Zionist representatives from all parts of the metropolitan area. U.S. Senator Jacob K. Javits was the principal speaker at the ceremonies renaming the Square.

The 19th anniversary of the Warsaw Ghetto uprising was observed according to the Hebrew date of the 27th of Nisan which, this year, occurred on May 1 and was ushered in on April 30. The commemoration of the Warsaw Ghetto uprising was also set aside as Memorial Day for the six million Jewish dead at the hands of the Nazis during World War II.

The attention of the people of New York to the observance of the 19th anniversary of the Warsaw Ghetto uprising on the evening of April 30, at a large memorial meeting in Bnai Jeshurun Jewish Center, New York City, under the sponsorship of the Manhattan Region of the Zionist Organization of America, was directed in a proclamation issued by Mayor Robert F. Wagner, setting aside May 1, 1962, as "Warsaw Ghetto Uprising Commemoration Day in New York City." The Proclamation by the Mayor reads in part: "Whereas: On the 19th day of April, 1943, the Jews of the Warsaw Ghetto arose against the tyranny and atrocities of the Nazi occupation forces; and their heroic action has continued to grow as a flame of inspiration wherever peoples are still oppressed; and the Zionist Organization of America is commemorating this date in the spirit of democracy and human dignity, now, therefore, I, Robert F. Wagner, Mayor of the City of New York, do hereby proclaim May 1, 1962, as 'Warsaw Ghetto Uprising Commemoration Day' in New York City, and do urge that the citizens of the City of New York get renewed inspiration from the gallant uprising against tyranny and oppression waged by the heroic peoples of the Warsaw Ghetto nineteen years ago." In a similar proclamation Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller, of New York State, emphasized the "incredible valor in the revolt of the Jewish inhabitants of the Warsaw Ghetto." The Proclamation continued: "Hopelessly outnumbered from the start, knowing they would fail, and without modern arms, they rose in rebellion against the might of the Nazi military war machine. "Faith and spirit were greater than material things, for at first their hopeless rebellion was successful. With the bravery of desperation they threw back the first attack of the Storm Troopers who had been sent to liquidate them. It took the full fury of the then irresistible German Army to crush them. These unforgetiable patriots fought to death as martyrs in the cause of freedom. On this day we honor them as God-fearing men and women who preferred to die fighting rather than to live on bended knees in humiliation and slavery."

An overflow audience attended the memorial meeting at the Jewish Community Centre, in New York, sponsored by the Manhattan Region of the Zionist Organization of America at which Justice Michael A. Musmanno was the principal speaker. The meeting was presided over by Moses Torczyner, president of the Region. Other speakers were: Hon. David Rivlin, Consul of Israel in New York; and Abram Salomon, associate chairman of the Administrative Council of the Manhattan Zionist Region.

Cantor Ruben Taube, of Beth Shalom Congregation, in Washington, D.C., himself a former inmate of Auschwitz, sang liturgical selections. Mrs. Sarah Feinstein read from the Psalms.

Justice Musmanno, of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, who presided at the Nuremberg Trial and testified at the Eichmann trial in Israel, reviewed the valiant resistance and death of the close to 60,000 Jews who were slaughtered by Nazi artillery, flame-throwers, and dynamite. "I say that there is not enough water in the ocean, not enough paint in the paint factories of the world, not enough erasers in all the rubber factories, not enough carborundum in the mills to wash away, cover up, erase, or wipe out the shame, the disgrace, the odium of those who perpetrated this supreme outrage against humanity. And at the same time nothing can ever dim the honored glory of those 56,000 men, women, and children who gave the lie to the charge that the Jews did not fight back."

Justice Musmanno described the destruction of the Warsaw Ghetto with all its brave defenders as "the Alamo of the Jews". The speaker pointed out that the massacre of the Warsaw Ghetto was part of the Jewish extermination program which finally exacted a toll of six million dead. "This extermination program was under the direction and domination of Adolf Eichmann who has recently been tried and convicted in Israel."

Justice Musmanno maintained that "the State of Israel has advanced the law of civilization by trying Eichmann. It has added effectiveness to the precedent established at Nuremberg, namely, that those who kill thousands and millions will be punished as surely as those who kill only a single person."

Moses Torczyner, president of the Manhattan Zionist Region, who presided, in his address said: "Our thoughts are not motivated by any desire for revenge. They are derived from a rather sober appraisal of the conditions our people face today, 20 years after the holocaust. They are derived from the necessity to realize the lessons which history taught us at such a price!" Mr. Torczyner pointed to the fact that today, with the exception of Jews living under democratic rule, Jews in many parts of the world are subject to persecution in various degrees," adding that "Israel itself remains surrounded by neighbors who openly clamor for its destruction."

Referring to the resolution of condemnation adopted by the U.N. General Assembly against Israel for exercising what Mr. Torczyner called "its inalienable right of self-defense against Syrian aggression", he continued:

"The silence on the part of the democracies, on the part of the United Nations, in the face of such threats for extermination, remains puzzling, inexcusable, and ominous. Obviously enough, only the readiness of Israel to punish the aggressor prevents another crime against our people today, and nothing else, as unfortunate as it may sound. Obviously, too, in other countries Jews are at the mercy of their governments."

In conclusion Mr. Torczyner voiced the hope that the democracies under the leadership of the United States will move from diplomacy to a policy of truth, justice, and peace. "Until then, Israel must remain strong to deter aggressors. It remains one of our tasks to help safeguard Israel's security."

In his opening remarks, Abram Salomon, associate chairman of the Administrative Council of the Manhattan Zionist Region, maintained that "heroism of the Warsaw Ghetto fighters as well as the martyrdom of the European Jewry should be remembered not only by the Jewish people of this generation and generations to come but also by the Christian world in whose midst six million Jews were put to death and great treasures of the spiritual heritage of the Jewish people were destroyed."

Mr. Salomon said: "Just as world Jewry has dedicated one day to collective commemoration of the martyrs and heroes, the Christian world is duty bound to set aside a similar day of remembrance in order to take stock of the past experiences and to arouse the conscience of the nations against hatred, anti-Semitism, and acts of genocide."

Mr. Salomon sharply criticized the failure of the U.S. Government to initiate in the U.S. Congress steps for the ratification of the Genocide Convention which was adopted by the U.N. General Assembly in 1948 and came into force on January 12, 1951. He pointed out that the U.S.A. voted in the General Assembly for the adoption of the Genocide Convention and "it is hard to understand the reasons for withholding or delaying ratification particularly when 59 nations, including Soviet Russia, have already ratified this Convention."

Commenting on the measures taken in Soviet Russia against the practice of Jewish religion, Mr. Salomon pointed out that during 1948 debate on the Genocide Convention in the General Assembly of the U.N., Soviet Russia proposed an amendment to extend the definition of genocide to include "cultural genocide" through deliberate destruction of the language, religion, or culture of any national, religious, or racial group. This Soviet Russian amendment was not adopted as it was felt that the protection of these rights belong to the field of human rights.

The memorial meeting saw the presentation of a statuette of the prophet, Isaiah, to Justice Michael A. Musmanno in recognition of his role as an "intrepid fighter for justice and equality and upholder of man's dignity."

Bolivian Rabbi Receives Highest Distinction

For the first time in Bolivian history, the country's highest distinction, the Order of the Condor of the Andes, has been conferred on a Jew, Rabbi Gunther Friedlaender, the Rabbi of the Bolivian Jewish community. In a communication to Samual Bronfman, chairman of the North American Executive of the World Jewish Congress, the Jewish Central Committee of Bolivia states that the Order was conferred on Rabbi Friedlaender by President Paz Estenssoro for his "efficient intervention in the preparation and signature of the Agreements on Technical Cooperation and Cultural Interchange between Bolivia and Israel, and the elevation in rank of both Diplomatic Missions, thus increasing the existing cordial relations between the two nations."

In addition to his duties as rabbi, Dr. Friedlaender is the director of the Colegio Israelita, a Jewish day school which, under his direction, has become a model school attended by both Jewish and non-Jewish children. The congratulations of the World Jewish Congress were sent to Rabbi Friedlaender by Mr. Bronfman. The central Jewish Committee in Bolivia is an affiliate of the World Jewish Congress.

which, according to the World Health Organization, will need 40,000 doctors within a decade."

On this point Dr. Prywes said his school's emphasis was on developing medical educators and public health specialists — "men and women who will be able to teach modern medical skills to others and develop systems of medical education indigenous to their respective countries."

Known as Israel's "roving ambassador of medicine," Dr. Prywes paid a brief visit after having toured various Latin-American countries at the invitation of their Governments and universities.
